PREFACE.

The Publisher of the BALTIMORE CITY DIRECTORY has been for many years making an effort to induce the City Council to pass an ordinance for the Renumbering of the Houses in the City of Baltimore upon the Decimal System; having made, in the past ten years, three unsuccessful efforts before the Council at considerable expense; and the City Authorities having also made, in the last three years, many unsuccessful attempts to correct and renumber the houses upon the present or consecutive plan, under the ordinance of '71, which allowed only correcting or replacing numbers (not renumbering a whole street) that had fallen off or been destroyed: from which attempts the numbering has been made far more confused and unintelligible. A former officer of the City came to the conclusion that it was impossible to get the work done right without renumbering each street from the beginning.

Now, under these adverse circumstances, the Publisher of the Directory, believing that every house owner had a right to demand of the City an accurate and duly established number for his house, and, in order that it should be done at the lowest rate, and in a uniform and handsome manner, the city, therefore, should have it done and pay for it, because it could be done thus at least 50 per cent. cheaper than by individuals. The taking of the names for the Directory and the numbering of the houses being so closely connected and dependent on each other; and, "What is everybody's business is nobody's business," that he determined, in order to make his Directory a success, to undertake the difficult task of not only enlisting public opinion in favor of the adoption of the Decimal System, but also of inducing the Council to pass an ordinance to carry it out. All that has been accomplished. He sent eight or nine thousand of his "Reasons for Renumbering the Houses" broadcast over the City, following them up with the annexed petition:

To the Honorable the City Council of Baltimore:

The undersigned, publisher of the Baltimore City Directory for the last twenty years, respectfully represents to your honorable body, that in canvassing for the Directories during that time, he has been cognizant of the fact that the present mode of numbering the houses is very defective, and that the many efforts to renumber or correct the same within the last year, by the City Authorities, have clearly demonstrated the inefficiency of the consecutive system. The consequences now are, that the numbers in nearly every street in the city are in a confused condition.

Now, what is the remedy to relieve our whole community of the harassments and perplexities growing out of this plan of numbering the houses? We answer, it is the tried and efficient Decimal System: this has been adopted in Philadelphia, Washington, Richmond and St. Louis; from those cities there has not come up a single complaint. That it has worked well they all agree. Whatever they can do in those cities, we of Baltimore certainly can accomplish. Very few objections can be made to the Decimal System: its advantages are many. It is simple, efficient and permanent, and when change becomes necessary, (by the erection of additional buildings in a square,) it will never extend beyond the square wherein it originates. In the elongation of streets it requires only a continuation of the numbers.

To meet the objection urged by a few business men—the removal of established numbers—the old numbers also might remain up for some time; the new official numbers are so different from the old, that they will be distinguished easily from each other. This has been done in St. Louis to the satisfaction of the business community.

The undersigned has been for a number of years informing himself as to the merits of the Decimal System. The publishing of the City Directory, also, he thinks, has further qualified him for the task of accomplishing this work in a correct and satisfactory manner. If your honorable body should think proper to place this trust in his hands, he pledges himself to give his personal attention to all the details necessary for the perfecting of the Decimal System as a whole, and at such low rates as will be barely remunerative. And your petitioner will ever pray, &c. JOHN W. WOODS.

He then employed several men to call on the citizens for their signatures, and succeeded in obtaining 2,850 of the active business persons—the property holders, consequently taxpayers, of the city; not five in a hundred declining to sign it; and not more than eight or ten, all told, refusing to do so. We firmly believe that the signers in favor of it would not have objected to the city paying $12,000 for renumbering the houses, there being about 50,000 houses and 150,000 handsome silver plated figures. The city to pay twenty-five cents per house, for a hovel or a palace. The vote in favor of the bill in the First Branch was 16 to 3; in the Second Branch, 7 to 2. His Honor the Mayor vetoed it: thus repudiating the 2,850 signatures and the vote of more than two-thirds of the Council.

We hope it will not be considered presumption or captiousness to call attention to some of his objections to the bill. His Honor says: "The system is, doubtless, effective in Philadelphia, where the streets cross each other at right angles; where they are equidistant the one from the other, and run either north and south, or east and west, and nearly every one of which passes through the entire length or width of the city." These are bold assertions, and, we think, cannot be sustained by the facts. Ridge road runs diagonally across the city, passing from near the Delaware to Laurel Hill, on to Manayunk; also, Turner's lane, Tavern road, Germantown road, Frankford road, Poplar street, and several adjacent ones, not parallel with the principal streets; in the 16th ward nearly all curved. So much for the city proper. If the Schuylkill is crossed, there are but few streets at right angles. Germantown streets are not at right angles with the city proper. Along the Delaware, in the 18th and 19th wards there are no right angles with the city streets. Frankford is a labyrinth. Yet all these streets and suburban towns are numbered decimally, and are far more difficult to number than the streets of Baltimore. His Honor seems not to have known that not only Philadelphia, but also Washington, Richmond, St. Louis and Wilmington, Del., are numbered with the Decimal System. Wilmington, little more than a village, with 30,000 population, looks to the future for a permanent enumeration, and yet Baltimore, with her 350,000, is thwarted in her laudable desire to have her houses numbered correctly,

His Honor is rather unfortunate in finding a street between two given points that the Decimal System will fail to work through. He says, "on the north side of East Baltimore street there is not a single wide or principal thoroughfare between Exeter street and Central avenue; on the south side of it there is but one street (Lloyd,) and that is but two short blocks in length." [If there was but one it could be numbered decimally.] "Now, on the south side, will the particular decimal figure commence at Exeter street, terminate at Lloyd, and from thence take up another decimal figure terminating at Central avenue, or will the decimal commence at Exeter street and terminate at Central avenue?" The Decimal System requires a street to run through and not to terminate at the street it reaches. For instance: Baltimore street going west from Charles street reaches Liberty street before the decimal number 100 is exhausted, and regardless of Hanover or Sharp streets. There are thirty-eight houses to be numbered on the north side of Baltimore street from Charles to Liberty. From Exeter street to Central avenue, on the south side of Baltimore street, there are thirty-six houses to be numbered, leaving fourteen numbers for the unoccupied spaces; on the north side of Baltimore street there are twenty-six houses to be numbered, leaving twenty-four numbers for unoccupied spaces.

It is not necessary to say more than merely to state these facts. There are four or five squares in the city that have some twelve or fifteen more houses in the square, in the aggregate, than the decimal system provides for; but owners of houses, all their lives, have been using fractions of ½ and ¼ numbers on their houses, and should be willing to tolerate the use of some fifteen fractions in fifty thousand houses, for the establishing of the most perfect system that was ever devised for the numbering of the houses in a large city.

His Honor, in stating his objections to the bill relative to the opening of Lexington street, has not stated them as distinctly as we could have desired; the elongation of Lexington street has become a law, but not an accomplished fact; consequently, the imaginary altering of all the numbers from Fayette street to the terminus of Gay street is a fiction. The street having been surveyed, each opening could have been defined, and the numbering of the houses could have been fixed accordingly, at the crossings of each square; to take down all the decimal numbers on each square to the terminus of Gay street, would be no greater disaster than to take down all the consecutive numbers on German street to Fremont, as they cannot be corrected in any other way; there being three squares now of duplicated numbers at the beginning of that street.

On Baltimore street between Fremont and Poppleton, His Honor says: "There is sufficient space for three blocks with no street intervening." They would be very small squares. The difficulty in this block is, that the houses all are small and narrow; the square of ground is not much longer than many other squares in the city. There are fifty-six houses on the north side of Baltimore street between Fremont and Poppleton; now, by adding at the forty-fifth house a fraction (½) and continuing it on each alternate number to the fiftieth house, it would be all right. A person owning a small house could not make any objection, it would not lessen the character of his house, and he would be yielding something for the public good. In the next ten years it is likely the houses may be changed, if so, they will require enlargement; and the square might be renumbered (if the decimal system is in use) without disturbing any other number or square.

His Honor says: "The system will obligate the renumbering of nearly every building in the city." That is so, and if the work is done properly, every house must have a new number, so that the decimal system shall have a fair start—the two theories cannot work together. There need be no loss to the business houses on account of the new numbers. When the new numbers are put in use the old numbers can be allowed to stay on the houses a year or two, and can be printed on billheads, cards, &c., new and old, along side of each other, as they can be made easily distinguishable; after a year or two the use of the legal number gradually will wipe out the old one.

His Honor goes on: "This will prove detrimental to the interest of every storekeeper, manufacturer and merchant, and particularly those that have a country trade." The evils of introducing the decimal system are perfectly overwhelming in imagination. The people of Philadelphia were worked up with their imaginings to a great pitch, and remonstrated strongly against the measure; but their Council passed it nearly unanimously. Yet the manufacturers, the merchants, the storekeepers, and the city itself, have survived the disasters anticipated from the passage of the bill; and not the slightest utterance of dissatisfaction exists; on the contrary, every Philadelphian boasts of the advantages and facilities afforded the merchants, storekeepers, manufacturers, and even the countryman has no difficulty in finding any house in the City, without stopping persons along the street to inquire where such a number can be found.

His Honor again says: "The evil of which it is said some complain, can be readily remedied by a more vigorous application of the third section of the Ordinance of 1871." The more vigorous application of the law means, to follow the canvassers of a Directory and renumber the houses after the canvasser has got his names for the Directory, as was done in the canvass of 1871 for the Directory of 1872; at that time there were some five or six men crossing the path of the canvassers while canvassing the Eastern section of the City; thus thwarting the publisher of the Directory instead of co-operating with him. That law of 1871 says: "When an error or irregularity exists in the numbering of houses, or when they are without numbers, in any street, lane or alley in the City of Baltimore, to have the same corrected or numbered without unnecessary delay, as soon as the facts are brought to his (the Inspector of Buildings) notice." Now, that much of the law is productive of continual agitation. How much more sensible would it be to pass a law that would last for a hundred years; one which could be corrected a square at a time without putting a whole street in confusion?
